“Evening Paper!”

The hoarse voice of the news vendor echoes across the busy street. It is only just afternoon, yet “evening” papers are on sale! It is just one example of the curious world of newspapers. Morning papers “go to bed” at night; evening papers go to bed during the early day! “Going to bed” is the way the world of newspapers talks when it means that a paper is being printed.

“Evening Paper!”

Have you ever thought of all the men and machines involved in producing those sheets of newsprint? From all parts of the world news comes in by telephone, telegraph, radio, and every way man has of communicating. Much of this news is collected by news agencies, vast hires of busy workers who receive the news items and sent them out. Other news comes in to the newspaper office from reporters. What a hopeless tangle of information a newspaper office seems! And yet, out of all this jumble and rush, and bustle, our newspapers appear with unflinching regularity. No matter when happens the paper must be on sale on time.

(A) Only reporters (B) Readers (C) News vendors (D) News agencies
44. Which of the following is NOT mentioned in the passage?
(A) A great number of people are engaged in producing papers.
(B) The newspaper office can get the news from time to time.
(C) How a news agency can keep the cost of a newspaper down.
(D) Whatever happens the paper would be on sale at regular time.
45. This passage implies that _____.
(A) speed is important
(B) people like reading evening papers more than morning papers
(C) the writer hates to be interrupted by the hoarse voice
(D) the writer himself is an editor of a paper.
