It is difficult for doctors to help a person with a damaged brain. Without enough blood, the brain lives for only three to five minutes and therefore more often the doctors can't fix the damage. Sometimes they are afraid to try something to help because it is dangerous to work on the brain. The doctors might make the patient's condition worse if he operates on the brain.

Dr. Robert White, a famous doctor and professor, finds a way to solve the problem. He thinks doctors should make the brain cool down. If it is cold enough, the brain can live without blood for 30 minutes. This gives the doctor a longer time to do something for the brain.

Dr. White tested his idea by experimenting on 13 monkeys. First, he taught them to do different jobs, and then he operated on them. He made the monkey's blood go through a machine. The machine cooled the blood. Later, the machine sent the blood back to the monkeys' brains. When the brain's temperature was down to 10°C, the supply of the blood to the brain was cut off. After 30 minutes, he turned the blood back and warmed the blood again. After operations, the monkeys were like what they had been before—still healthy and busy. Each one could still do the jobs the doctor had taught them.

46. The biggest difficulty in operating on the damaged brain is that _____.
(A) the time is too short for doctors (B) the patients are often too nervous
(C) the damage is extremely hard to fix (D) the blood-cooling machine might break down
47. The brain operation was made possible mainly by _____.
(A) taking the blood out of the brain (B) trying the operation on monkeys first
(C) having the blood go through a machine (D) lowering the brain's temperature
48. With Dr. White's new idea, the operation on the damaged brain _____.
(A) can last as long as 30 minutes (B) can keep the brain's blood warm
(C) can keep the patient's brain healthy (D) can help monkeys do different jobs
49. What is the right order of the steps in the operation?
(A) send the cooled blood back to the brain (B) stop the blood to the brain
(C) have the blood cooled down (D) operate on the brain
